The Defence and Security Committee (DEFSEC) focuses on key developments in defence, security and the role of reserve forces in the changing international security environment. We are looking for a motivated and knowledgeable reservist to strengthen the committee and contribute to its international work.

Who are we looking for?

We welcome a reservist with an interest in defence and security, preferably with experience or expertise in the military or civilian domain.

Relevant backgrounds and interests include:

- Defence and security expertise: Knowledge of NATO, regional security developments, international relations and defence policy.
- Military and civilian experience: The ability to bring together military and civilian perspectives, contributing relevant expertise and national insights on the role and development of reserve forces.
- Research and analysis: An interest in taking responsibility for, or actively supporting, specific committee research topics and projects.
- International cooperation: The ability and willingness to contribute constructively to discussions and collaborate with colleagues from different NATO and partner countries.

What will you do?

You will actively contribute to the work of the committee by participating in regular online meetings, primarily via MS Teams, and supporting its research activities and projects.

What do we offer?

An opportunity to contribute to international discussions on defence and security, share expertise with reservists and defence professionals from other countries, and help shape CIOR's contribution to the development of reserve forces within the NATO environment.

Interested?

If you have an interest in defence and security, are willing to contribute actively to international cooperation and would like to bring your knowledge and national perspective to the work of DEFSEC, we would be pleased to hear from you.

The above profile describes the ideal candidate rather than strict formal requirements. Commitment, active participation and a willingness to contribute are the most important qualities.

Join us and help shape the future of defence and security within the international reservist community!
